   b) In the event – This is not the correct answer. Try again.
   c) In an event – This is not the correct answer. Try again.
   d) In the event of – This is the correct answer. 'In the event of' means 'if' and is followed by a noun phrase. It can be used to describe both real and unreal conditions, more frequently in formal rather than informal contexts.

2. You are free to re-use this material, ________ you acknowledge the source.
   a) unless – This is not the correct answer. 'Unless' means 'if…not' or 'except if'. Try again.
   b) provided that – This is the correct answer. 'Provided that' means 'if' and can be used to describe both real and unreal conditions, more frequently in formal rather than informal contexts.
   c) as long – This is not the correct answer, although 'as long as' would be ok here. Try again.
   d) supposing – This is not the correct answer. 'Supposing' is used to imagine unreal conditions.

3. You can borrow my books ________ you return them tomorrow.
   a) in condition – This is not the correct answer. Try again.
   b) on condition of – This is not the correct answer. Try again.
   c) on condition that – This is the correct answer. 'On condition that' means 'if' and is followed by a noun phrase. It is used to describe both real and unreal conditions, more frequently in formal rather than informal contexts.
   d) to condition that – This is not the correct answer. Try again.
4. Maria is so unreliable! ________ she's late? What'll we do then?
   a) What if – This is the correct answer. 'What if' is an informal phrase used to imagine unreal conditions and to ask questions about their possible outcomes.
   b) What – This is not correct. There is a word missing from this phrase. Try again.
   c) What as – This is not correct. Try again.
   d) Unless – This is not correct. 'Unless' means 'if…not' or 'except if'. Try again.

5. It's sunny at the moment, but I'll take an umbrella __________ it rains later.
   a) just of case – 'Of' is not correct here. Try again.
   b) just in case – This is the correct answer. 'In case' means 'because (something) might happen' or 'because there is a risk of (something)'. Adding 'just' makes the outcome (rain later) seem less likely to happen.
   c) just case – A word is missing in this expression. Try again.
   d) just a case – 'A' is not correct here. Try again.

6. I must tell him, __________ he'll be really upset.
   a) anyway – This is not the correct answer. A conditional word or phrase is needed here. Try again.
   b) other ways – This is not the correct answer. Try again.
   c) otherwise – This is correct. 'Otherwise' can be used to describe an outcome which is likely to happen (he'll be upset) if the condition (telling him) is not met.
   d) other wise – This is not the correct spelling. Try again.
